Local Judge Presents Plans for Community Work Program to Romulus City Council

Judge Felix Rogalle

By Tom Shamanski

At the November 25, 1991, meeting of the Romulus City Council, Judge Felix Rogalle of the 34th District Court presented the Council with a request for funding for a community work program for persons convicted of certain misdemeanors.

The basic idea of the proposal is to provide an alternative method of sentencing through the use of physical labor. The types of labor involved should not fall within the realm of City employees' jobs.

Before the City Council presentation, Judge Rogalle and his staff fine-tuned the program and the proposal over a period of several months.

When contacted, Carol Bowman, Director of the Probation Department for the 34th District Court, named several local communities already utilizing similar programs. These communities include Taylor, Woodhaven, Canton, Livonia, and Inkster, among others.

"These other community programs have provided us with a lot of valuable history," Bowman stated. "We've tried to take the best parts of each program and blend them into our own program."

Bowman went on to say that the community-based work program should serve as an effective system to deter repeat offenses and/or offenders.

"We feel this program should make better use of the Romulus taxpayers' dollars, as, after initial funding, it should become self-supporting," she added.

Bowman elaborated, explaining that the misdemeanant should pay an "out-of-pocket" daily fee. This money should then pay for a supervisor, equipment, insurance, and supporting clerical work.

Concluding, Bowman stated, "Mayor McAnally has been very supportive all along. Also, we felt the City Council was very receptive to the presentation." □

Wick Elementary Saving Labels for Free Sports Equipment

Students at Wick Elementary School are currently conducting a label-collection drive that promises to deliver valuable athletic equipment. As part of its "Labels for Education" program, the Campbell Soup Company is offering free equipment to schools in exchange for labels from the company's products.

According to Charles Shamey, principal of Wick Elementary, schools may redeem the labels for free athletic equipment, audio/visual equipment, reference books, and teaching aids. "We hope to collect 10,000 labels before the drive ends on March 1, 1992," said Shamey. "That's how many we'll need for the volleyball set and two kickball nets that we'd like to obtain."

Labels from all Campbell's® soups (Condensed, Low Sodium, Gold-Label, Chunky, Home Cookin', Soup for One, Quality Soup and Recipe Mix, and Special Request varieties), beans, fresh mushrooms and tomatoes, and tomato juice; Campbell's® food service pack soups, entrees, sauces and gravies, and frozen foods and juices; "V-8"™ Vegetable Juice and Low Sodium Vegetable Juice; Franco-American® gravy and pasta products; Swanson® canned products, frozen dinner/entrees and pot pies, and fried chicken; Prego® spaghetti sauces; Pepperidge Farm® cookies, crackers, fresh bakery products, and frozen foods; Mrs. Paul's® frozen foods; Vlasic® pickle products; and Marie's® salad dressings are redeemable for free equipment.

"Proofs" to be saved vary from product to product. For canned food products, save the front portion of the label. Save bottom-flap UPC panels from all Campbell's® Quality Soup and Recipe Mix products; "proof of purchase" seals (UPC symbols) from Pepperidge Farm® products; "proof of purchase" seals from all Swanson® frozen foods; "quality pledge" panels from Mrs. Paul's® products; lids from Vlasic® pickle products; and safety seals from Marie's® salad dressings. All labels should be trimmed, if possible, to save time and confusion.

"We know we have many friends in the community who want to help," stated Dawn Kelly, president of Wick's PTO. "They can do so by saving labels and giving them to our students, or by dropping them off at Wick or the Romulus IGA."

Kelly also said that the Wick PTO is looking for more parental and community involvement in all of its projects.

"Volunteers are needed to trim those labels which are not properly prepared," she said, "and our membership could definitely use a boost. You don't have to be the parent of a Wick student to join our group; all you need is an interest in supporting our city's youth."

The Wick Elementary School PTO meets at the School at 7 p.m. on the second Wednesday of every month (except for holidays, etc.). Meetings are always open to the public. □

VFW Remembers 50th Anniversary of Attack on Pearl Harbor

On Saturday, December 7, 1991, Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post #9568, Romulus, will remember the attack on Pearl Harbor which precipitated the United States' entry into World War II. This local event will be held in conjunction with the main observance in Honolulu, Hawaii, and the kickoff to the beginning of the 50th anniversary of World War II. Similar events of remembrance will occur at more than 10,600 VFW posts in every state and throughout Puerto Rico, the Pacific, Europe, Panama, and the Virgin Islands.

Romulus VFW Post #9568 invites the public to join their commemoration at a memorial service to be held in the City Council Chambers at Romulus City Hall beginning at 12:30 p.m. sharp on Saturday, December 7.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, founded in 1899, is the Nation's oldest major veterans organization. The VFW membership exceeds 2.2 million, including more than one million World War II veterans, 300,000 Korean War veterans, 600,000 Vietnam veterans, and veterans from conflicts such as Panama, Grenada, Lebanon, and Desert Storm. □

Shhhhh! Don't Tell Virgil!

When the World Wrestling Federation's Ted Dibiase (The Million Dollar Man) was in the Metro area for a recent wrestling match, he dropped in for a tanning session at the Romulus Tanning Salon and "held up" the manager, Lindsay Brugger. She didn't seem to mind, though. Said Brugger: "He was very pleasant to meet."

The Traffic Stop

By Officer Rick Schwartz, Romulus Police Department

The following article was written by a 17-year-old high-school student.

"Make it click." "Buckle up." "Only dummies don't wear seat belts." The slogans are trite, yet their message is valid. I have always worn my seat belt, and it paid off early one morning in May. We Almost Escaped Uninjured

I remember waking up to my passenger's cries much like you wake up to an alarm clock. I remember hearing my name being called as if from somewhere far away, and then the cries got closer and louder. As I realized I was in the driver's seat, I discovered that the car was already going off the road and toward a signpost. Following my first and only instinct to avoid a head-on collision, I swerved back toward the road.

We almost escaped uninjured, but the sign caught the right-rear of the car and sent us careening across the road. When we hit the median, I remember seeing dirt flying everywhere, blocking our view of everything else. I felt inertia pulling us over and around, and the skylight hit my head as the vehicle lurched to a halt.

I was unsure of what to do then. I somehow crawled into the back seat, got a door open, and crawled out. I called for my passenger, but he was confused and did not know how to escape. I explained how I had gotten out, and he soon emerged from the wreckage looking just as thunderstruck as I did.

Debris Thrown Violently from Car

The car was upside down, its frame crushed except for the passenger compartment where we had been kept safe. There was debris scattered for hundreds of feet — not just glass and plastic, but items that had been locked inside the car for emergency use: a jack, tire chains, even a first-aid kit. All had been thrown hundreds of feet by the force of the car.

As we waited for the ambulance, it was clear that, if we had not been wearing our seat belts, we would have either been violently thrown from the car or shoved into a part of the car that would not have kept us safe. As time passed, deputy sheriffs, paramedics, nurses, emergency-room doctors, and even the hospital chaplain confirmed our suspicions. "Good thing you wore your seat belts." "Your seat belt just saved your life."

Both my passenger and I were released from the hospital that same morning with only minor bruises. We were, of course, very lucky, but it wasn't luck that we were wearing our seat belts. We had chosen to do that whenever we were in a car, and it paid off.

We had listened to the trite slogans. Maybe more people should.

On Tuesday, November 12, 1991, at approximately 1:30 p.m., a head-on collision occurred at Five Points. That collision very much confirms the article that you just read. Both drivers had their seat belts on; only one had minor injuries. The front-seat passenger in one of the vehicles did not have her seat belt on. Her face impression was in the windshield, leaving blood, skin, and hair on it. Her face was bloody from multiple cuts. The glove box was completely destroyed by the passenger's injured knees. □

Giving Thanks for Presents

By Tom Shamanski

"I want presents, Dad. I want lots of presents!" cried my seven-year-old daughter Meredith.

"Okay, Honey," I smiled. "Settle down, now, and tell me what you want Santa to bring you."

"No, Dad," frowned Meredith, a slight hint of exasperation in her voice. "Not Christmas. I want presents for Thanksgiving! I want a rock-a-bye, cries-real-tears, goes-real-potty, and occasionally cooks-real-hamburgers Donald McRonald doll."

"Whoa, hold on now, Kid. You're kidding, right? I mean, I never got presents for Thanksgiving when I was a kid."

"Gee," said Meredith, "that's too bad; did you ask?"

Silence.

"I'm going outside to play, now. If you watch the news, let me know how the markets did today, okay?"

Breathing deeply, I nodded. I didn't know if she wanted to know about Farmer Jack, Foodtown, or Kroger, but I didn't care; I was simply too upset about this Thanksgiving-present thing. Fortunately, Joe, at four, didn't really know his holidays yet, and had been playing outside — Joe The Innocent. Within moments, thinking of Joe, I was feeling better.

"Daddy?" It was Joe. "I want a GI Joe for Thanksgiving."

"GI Joe?! That's all you ever want is a GI Joe, Joe. Besides, you guys are not getting presents for Thanksgiving! And I'm gonna tell Grandma to make you grilled cheese sandwiches for Thanksgiving dinner. So, what do you think about that, GI Joe?"

"That's good!" Joe cried. "That's my favorite."

Befuddled and confused about this whole mess, I sought out the child behavioral specialist that my sister had been sending me to for several years.

Entering her office, I said, "Dr. Nursrime, I'm not here for myself this time; it's my kids."

"Okay, how about we go into the playroom and share awhile?"

Then, working with some Legos and wishing she had Lincoln Logs, I explained the situation. Although the good doctor was in the corner, giggling while playing with Ken and Barbie dolls, I intuitively knew that she was still taking it all in.

Looking up and grinning, she quickly slipped her doctor face on and said, "So, what's the big deal about Christmas presents? Get Meredith a fax machine and get Joe a used bazooka." She knew the kids well.

"But . . . but . . . I wasn't . . . Listen, I gotta go."

"Okay," she said, turning back to her dolls. "But I have to charge you for a full session, you know."

"Oh, absolutely. Hey, since we discussed two people, I'm shocked you're not charging double."

. . . "Hey, wait just a . . ."

When I returned home, the kids came rushing up to me, bouncing and grinning like Miss Piggy marionettes.

"Hi, Dad," said Meredith. "Joe and I have been talking about the presents for Thanksgiving." Oh my gosh, I thought, what could Einstein and The Terminator have come up with, here?

"Let me tell! Let me tell!" bubbled Joe. "We don't want anything for Thanksgiving, Daddy. We'll just wait for Santa like you want us to. What do you think about that, Daddy? What do you think?"

I thought it wasn't too bad. The doll was about $10; the GI Joe was $12. □

Lansing Update

All information submitted by James A. Kosteva, State Representative for the 37th District

House Bill Would Expand 'Hate Crime' Reporting

The House has approved a bill that would require local police chiefs and county sheriffs to report information on crimes motivated by racial, ethnic, religious, gender, or sexual prejudice or bias. The expanding reporting would create and maintain accurate statistical records on the number and types of hate crimes committed in Michigan, which would help governmental and public organizations to determine the extent and trends of this type of crime, and develop agencies against it. The information base created by the bill would help develop coordinated and effective responses to criminals who commit individual acts of violence or destruction, or orchestrated campaigns of terror attacks.

Ex-workers Could Keep Their HMO Coverage Under House Legislation

The House has passed a bill that would require health maintenance organizations (HMOs) to allow persons whose HMO group coverage has been terminated to switch to an individual-coverage contract. Often, people who lose a job are left without health-care insurance for themselves and their families. Under the bill, a person who loses group HMO coverage, either because a group coverage is discontinued or because the worker's job is terminated, could continue individual and family coverage on a private-pay basis.

Measure Would Ban Monthly Charge for Unlisted Phone Number

One section of a major rewriting of Michigan's telecommunications law now being considered by the State Legislature would prevent telephone companies from charging a monthly surcharge to customers who want an unlisted number. Currently, customers who do not want their name, address, and telephone number published in the directory or released in other ways must pay a one-time fee of about $8 as well as an additional monthly surcharge. Supporters of the measure say that telephone companies should not charge a customer a monthly fee to keep this information confidential, since whatever it costs the company not to publish the number can surely be recovered from the initial fee.

House Votes To Help Schools Improve Energy Systems

The House has voted to help Michigan schools improve their energy systems more efficiently and without adding to current expenses by allowing school districts to award "performance-based" contracts for energy conservation projects outside of the competitive bid process. Under the bill, the expenses of improving or rebuilding existing heating, cooling, and lighting energy systems in school buildings could be paid with revenues that the school system will save through the energy improvements. The school districts could award the work to a "sole-source" contractor without going through a competitive bid process or through the traditional process of letting the contract out for bids. Similar legislation has been successful in other states.

Bill Would Bring Insurance Under Anti-trust Laws

Because Michigan's current anti-trust laws are not applied to the insurance industry, insurers' associations can set uniform premium rates, effectively reducing the level of business competition between individual insurers. Legislation has been introduced in the House to repeal this anti-trust law exemption and compel the insurance companies to base their premium rates on actual losses rather than on an industry standard. The legislation would also prohibit insurers from using ratings organizations to file rates and from exchanging information that would allow them to jointly establish premium rates.

House Bill Would Consolidate Day-care Oversight

A bill that has been introduced in the House would move State licensing and oversight of child day-care facilities from the Department of Social Services to the Department of Education in order to consolidate the regulation of learning environments from infancy through the completion of school. □

Romulus Profile: Betsey Brown

By Tom Shamanski

"I love being able to help people," said Betsey Brown, 33, Administrative Aide and "right-hand person" to Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally. "There was an almost hopeless domestic situation a couple of years ago where a young lady with two children had no money and no place to go. The Mayor and I worked with her until she was on her feet and settled. Afterwards, whenever I'd see them at the store, the kids would come up and hug me. I think that's the best part of all."

Recently, I met with Brown, a Romulus native, for a late-afternoon interview at her City Hall office. As we both grabbed a mug of coffee, we stepped into an adjacent conference room where we could sit and chat at ease. A 1976 graduate of Romulus High School, Brown is an attractive young woman with hazel eyes and medium-length brown hair. Dressed neatly in pink with a seemingly endless smile, she conveyed a comfortable, wholesome, friendly image.

Brown's office is done in light browns and yellows, and is a step or two away from the Mayor's office. Amidst the filing cabinets, bookshelves, and her desk were a number of photographs and other collectibles. Although the workday was over, the feeling was that this is, indeed, a very busy place during working hours.

When asked how she reached her demanding, yet rewarding, position of Mayor's administrative aide, Brown replied, "I started working at City Hall in 1975 as a co-op student. After I graduated in 1976, I began working full-time in the City Clerk's office."

"Then, in 1979, I began a four-year stint as Deputy Treasurer for Mayor McAnally, who was, at that time, the City Treasurer. In 1983, when the Mayor was elected to the mayoral post, I went with her as her aide and have been here since."

And, I asked, what's it like working for a mayor who's generally recognized as one of the best mayors in the surrounding-Detroit area?

"It's very good; she's an excellent boss. She's hard to work for at certain times, but that's because she's such a hard worker herself. She is very dedicated and very intelligent, and everyone is impressed with her." Brown went on to say that she's proud to be associated with McAnally and feels fortunate to be able to learn from her.

Summing up her thoughts about the Mayor, Brown stated, "I believe she was made to do what she's doing."

Topping off our coffees, we then turned to Brown's job, one which seems to have been made for her.

"First of all, I do the normal clerical work expected in a position like mine. Then, I assist the Mayor with anything she needs. This includes scheduling to keep her when and where she's supposed to be. I remember when she first became Mayor, I was very enthusiastic and I was scheduling her very tightly. One day she joked, asking me to schedule in a couple of breaks for her each day."

Brown continued, saying that she coordinates several meetings each week. This can, she stated, be very complex, as she must try to find specific times when all involved parties are free to attend a meeting. Brown is also responsible for organizing special events — things that fall outside the normal, everyday activities.

"Helping residents takes up quite a bit of my time, especially around Christmas. Sometimes, people don't have places to go, or their plumbing will be bad, or they'll have similar problems."

Brown further stated that residents will call for almost any problem imaginable. If it's a City-related problem, she said, she will route the call to the appropriate department. However, if it's a personal problem — which many of the calls are — Brown will do whatever she can to help. (Speaking personally, I know Brown to be excellent and informative on the phone; she immediately puts callers at ease.)

Addressing the Mayor's "campaign time," Brown said, "Although I work on the campaign only after working hours, it's still an extremely busy time. Things become more intense, but sometimes it's a lot of fun, too." She also stated that she has been "kind of put in charge" of the campaigns. Setting up campaign headquarters and planning parties are but two of the activities that now fall under Brown's campaign domain.

I wondered what changes Brown has noticed over the eight years that she has served as McAnally's administrative aide.

"We've always been busy," she replied, "but it's a different kind of busy now. In 1983, a good 90% of our calls were complaints."

"Now, about 10% are complaints. The reason is that we've implemented several new projects that now automatically solve the majority of complaints. Of course, we're still busy implementing more projects for which we've taken on even more responsibility."

Even though McAnally ran unopposed in the mayoral election this year, I asked Brown — in a theoretical vein — what she would have done had McAnally lost.

"Well, I serve as an appointee of the Mayor; so, if she were defeated, I guess I'd be out looking for a job!" she exclaimed.

And who are some of the other people with whom she works on a regular basis?

Brown: "For approximately three years now, Hafeeza Khalifa has been our administrative secretary. She has really been a godsend, as she's a wonderful person who is efficient, pleasant, and friendly. Also, she's very good with the citizens.

"Sonya Brown — no relation — is our Romulus High School co-op student this year. She is also very nice and helps with the general clerical load."

* * *

Although Brown's parents, Betty and Carl, are originally from Tennessee, they have lived in Romulus for approximately 40 years. Her brother, Carl Jr., 41, and his wife Sandra are Romulus natives. Their children are Tim, 20, and Pam, 21. Living in Westland is Brown's sister Beverly, 38, and her husband Craig. They are parents to Eric, 16, and Kendra, 11.

When not involved with City business, Brown relaxes by making porcelain dolls. She attends a two- to three-hour class once a week in Belleville.

Remarked Brown, "For me, it's a very relaxing and a very unwinding thing to do. Normally, it takes about three weeks to complete a doll, although I recently did a three-foot reproduction of an antique doll that took several weeks."

"It can be an expensive hobby, though. Would you believe I spent $85 for the dress of the last doll I made? But I like it, so, for me, it's all worth it!"

Brown also goes to the Romulus Tanning Salon three times a week. And now that the campaign is over, she plans on resuming jazzercise classes at Barth School.

* * *

As we closed out our talk, I began to realize that the essence of Brown was captured in the quote which opens this article — her deep-seated desire to help others. It is, it seems, that same desire that keeps her churning with all her other duties and activities.

This helping of others surely helps all of us, and we are, truly, lucky that Betsey Brown is the terrific and vibrant person that she is. □

Romulus High School Athletics

Winter Seasons To Begin

By Fred Coleman, CAA, Athletic Director, Romulus Community Schools

The varsity Eagle basketball team will kick off the winter athletics season when they host Top 10-ranked Adrian on Tuesday, December 10.

"Our first two games are against preseason Top 10-ranked teams (Adrian, #7, and Utica Ford, #2), and those two games will really tell us where we are going to have to work to be a Top-10 contender ourselves," said Chris Molloy, third-year coach of the varsity basketball program.

The Eagles are very young this season, and experience on the varsity level is extremely limited, but, added Coach Molloy, "Teams better not count us out because this team works hard in practice, and I can guarantee you that they are going to go after teams from start to finish in our games."

Although the 1991-92 team has a lot of balance in all 14 players, it appears that Daniel Winston, Tyzedd Bowles, Roger Williams, Jeff Smith, Derek Hamlin, Rob Thompson, Yancy Yharbrough, and Mack Stillwagon will carry much of the load this season.

After the Adrian game, the Eagles will not be home again until the 1991 Christmas Invitational, which will take place on Saturday, December 21, and Monday, December 23.

Like the basketball Eagles, the wrestling program features a lot of youngsters as well.

Coach Norm Butler says that his lineup will vary from meet to meet because of the talent in this year's program, but expects Dale Gehringer and Mike Scully to lead the team to great success.

Also expected to have great seasons are Brian McNett, Rob Graham, Felton Bush, Leroy Prince, Jason Drouillard, and John Sylvester, but there are many others who may surprise the Eagle opponents as well.

The wrestlers open their season on Saturday, December 14, at the Lansing

Eastern Invitational, and return to Romulus for their home opener on Tuesday, December 17, against Plymouth Salem and John Glenn.

The Third Annual Romulus Royal Invitational will be held on Saturday, January 25, and is something that our wrestling fans will not want to miss.

The volleyball team lost all six starters from last year's team, but, although experience will be a little thin this season, Coach Gail Coleman says, "These young ladies will be able to build off of their athletic talent and, eventually, become a very solid volleyball team."

Tryouts for the volleyball program will conclude this week, and 24 young ladies will then begin perfecting their talents to get ready for the opening contest scheduled for Wednesday, December 18, versus New Boston Huron and Melvindale here at Romulus High beginning at 5:30 p.m.

The Fifth Annual Romulus Christmas Invitational will be held on Friday, December 27 (JV), and Saturday, December 28 (varsity), and is again expected to showcase some of the best volleyball teams in this area. Make plans to be there; I guarantee that you will not be disappointed.

Once again, attendance at our winter events will be restricted to those who wish to show good sportsmanship to our teams, our fans, and players from opposing schools. Any fans without proper identification or those who choose to act in an inappropriate manner will be asked to leave our facility and told not to return for the remainder of the season.

Those fans who want to join what is sure to be an exciting winter season are welcome to come and have a great time, but those looking for a place to "hang out" or "be cool" should find another place to go, as their "welcome" will be very short-lived.

Hope to see you this winter, as we finish our last season ever in our current gymnasium. (The new facility will open in the fall of 1992.) □

Banquet Honors Fall Athletes

By Fred Coleman, CAA, Athletic Director, Romulus Community Schools

On Monday, November 25, nearly 320 people attended the 1991 Fall Athletic Banquet.

The coaches presented awards to all of the athletes who successfully completed the requirements for those awards.

Special awards were presented by the Romulus Schools Athletic Director to the following people.

Most Valuable Player awards for 1991 were given to Brian Bartholomew (golf), Carmita Brown (basketball), Jim Catron (cross country), Charlie Dudonis (football), Jessica Kent (cheerleading), and Jenny McClure (tennis).

Scholar-Athlete awards were presented to Andrea Brown (basketball), Rob Graham (football), Amy Grishaber (cheerleading), Tearza Johnson (cross country), Michelle Slawinski (tennis), and Mack Stillwagon (golf).

A special award was also presented to John Devereaux for setting a new school record during football season by kicking a 45-yard field goal in the victory over Willow Run.

With the football program returning 24 letter-winners next season – after completing a season that saw the best record of any Romulus football team since the undefeated (9-0) 1954 team, and with the anticipation of the completion of our new facilities for next fall – it appears that those of you who follow the Eagles are in for a very exciting 1992-93 football season.

A special thanks to all of the parents and community members who supported this fall's teams. We truly hope that your support will continue as we move into what appears to be a very exciting winter season. □

THE COPY DEADLINE FOR OUR TUESDAY, DECEMBER 17, ISSUE IS THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12

Alumni Athletes in Action

By Fred Coleman, CAA, Athletic Director, Romulus Community Schools

I would just like to update our loyal Eagle fans on some of our past athletes and their current collegiate status.

Kim Lyles, who graduated in 1988, will enter her senior season at Grand Valley State as captain of the softball program, in which she has led the hitting attack for three seasons.

Graduates of the Class of '89, Laurie Berlin and Graham Scott, are both third-year players for their respective schools, with Graham seeing action at Pacific University while Laurie is the sixth person on the Texas Christian University team. Wrestler Tony Venturini, another 1989 graduate, competes for Eastern Michigan University and is currently ranked in the Top 25 in his NCAA weight class.

Eric Robinson, Kelvin Brown, Virgil Davis, and Larry Perkins – all 1990 graduates – are still representing the Romulus Eagles on their school rosters, as well: Eric is seeing action on the Lane College football team; Kelvin Brown is playing basketball for Michigan Christian College; Virgil Davis is also seeing basketball action at Southeast Oklahoma State; and Larry Perkins is currently competing in football at Kentucky State University after transferring from Lane University last season.

Graduates of 1991 who are still in action include John Dinkins, Izell Watkins, John Chambers, Torrey Mills, Jennifer Daniel, Marlan Hicks, and Eben Smith.

John Dinkins is currently enrolled at Trinidad College in Colorado and is seeing plenty of action for their basketball team. John Chambers and Marlan Hicks are competing for Knoxville College in basketball, also, while Izell Watkins will see both basketball and track action for Alabama Junior College this year.

Torrey Mills is attending Maine Institute and is averaging 10 points per game for their basketball program. Torrey hopes to transfer to a Division I program next fall and would like to play in the area, if possible.

Eben Smith is wearing #24 for the Michigan State Spartans, and, although Eben saw very little playing-time this fall, it appears that his future is bright in the MSU football program.

Jennifer Daniel is expected to be a starter on the Nationally ranked Wayne State University softball team. Playing outfield for the Tartars will be exciting for Jen, but her greatest thrill will be the trip that the team is taking to Moscow, Leningrad, and Rome this spring to compete in these foreign cities.

We will keep you updated as news concerning these fine student athletes comes to us.

Congratulations to all of them on their accomplishments. We wish them all the very best in the future. □

Port Side

By Captain Ron Dubsky, Ice Breaker II Sport-fishing Charters (941-3529)

Fishing for bluegills through the ice is one of life's more pleasant pastimes. A well-clothed ice angler can remain comfortable even when the temperature dips below zero.

As in most sports, there are those who consistently do well and those whose success is, at best, mediocre. Recently, I interviewed a few of the more successful anglers and got their tips for pulling bluegills through the ice.

Ice-fishing Poles

Most ice-fishing rods on the market are made of glass or graphite. They are short — about two to three feet in length. The graphite rods, which are more expensive than those made of glass, are much more sensitive. You can set the hook faster with graphite rods; this can be an important benefit when fish are barely sucking in the bait.

Some ice rods have uncomplicated reels to hold line, while others are equipped with more expensive graphite reels for deep-water fishing. A typical inexpensive pole has "L" hooks spaced about four inches apart for storing line.

Most fishermen agree that the longer rods work best. They can lift a bluegill from eight- to 10-foot depths with little effort. When fishing deeper than 10 feet, a reel-equipped rod is preferred in order to avoid a hand-over-hand retrieve.

Bobbers

For many years, cork bobbers were used almost exclusively by ice fishermen. One disadvantage of cork is that the bobbers load up with ice, but a more important disadvantage is that they aren't sensitive to a light bite. Most light bites cannot be detected when using a cork bobber.

Most savvy anglers use spring bobbers. They are much more sensitive and telegraph the lightest bite. Basically, the spring-type bobbers are short, straight lines of wire that are attached to the tip of the rod. The line is strung through a hole at the end of the wire, then through the eye at the end of the rod. When a bluegill bites, the spring dips downward. Some anglers prefer to rig their own spring bobbers, which they tape to the pole.

Line

Two- to four-pound-test monofilament line is the standard for most ice anglers, but, if you're really serious about catching a mess of big 'gills, try using transparent nylon thread (available in sewing departments). It tests at about three-quarters of a pound and is nearly invisible. Some anglers rig their rods with two- or four-pound-test gold Stren line. They then tie a tiny swivel to the end of the line and attach about six feet of the transparent thread. This gives them the advantage of seeing the gold line when it is lying on the ice. The six-foot leader is long enough so that the fish don't see the gold line. Another advantage of using the gold line is that you know exactly how far under the ice a hooked fish is when you are pulling him in.

Jigs

There are several sizes, colors, and shapes of bluegill jigs; the teardrop shape seems to work best. It's best to tie the jig directly to the line.

White and chartreuse seem to be the best overall colors; green and red are also popular. Most fishermen have their favorites, which include red dots, polka dots, and even stripes.

Jigs in sizes 10 or even 12 are ideal, but occasionally a tiny #14 is better for very finicky 'gills. Keep in mind that bluegills have very small mouths, so your offerings should be small.

Bait

The consensus among "oldtimers" is that the corn borer is the best bait. Also popular are waxworms and mousies. Corn borers are sometimes hard to find, and they are much more expensive than waxworms. Some anglers use maggots or wigglers for winter 'gills.

Live bait will not stay alive on the hook. To increase your catch, it's important to cover the hook's point with bait.

How To Catch 'Em

It's best to begin by lowering the jig to within one foot of the bottom. That's where the 'gills are most likely to be. A jigging rhythm calls for jigging the rod tip an inch or so for five to 10 seconds and then keeping still for about a half minute; then repeat the action. If, after several repetitions, you don't have any action, raise the jig another foot off the bottom and repeat the jigging action. If you still have no strikes, raise the jig another foot.

At times, bluegills are suspended several feet off the bottom, so it's important to try various depths until you locate the school. Bluegills simply won't move very far vertically to take a bait, so you must have your offering at the correct depth. If, after finding the right depth, the bluegills stop biting, drill more holes in the immediate area and keep fishing at the same depth. The school of fish may move away a few yards, but they'll nearly always stay at the same depth.

Time of Day

The first and last hours of daylight are best to catch bluegills through the ice. It's a waste of time to fish for them in the middle of the day.

So, give "bluegilling" a try this winter. . . . And take the advice of the "oldtimers" — take along a spud to test the ice ahead. The life you save will be your own. □

Big Buck Contest

The Romulus Metro Archery Club, a member of the International Bowhunters Organization, has a new scoring system for its annual Big Buck Contest, which runs until January 1, 1992. The number of points (one inch or longer) multiplied by the weight will determine the three winners. Bowhunters may register at the Romulus Metro Archery Club Indoor Archery Range. There is a $3 entry fee.

Point of Law

By Murray A. Duncan, Jr., attorney

If an individual receives a moving violation while his/her license is suspended, the Secretary of State will automatically add a like suspension to the previous suspension. For example, if John Utturn is suspended for 90 days and gets a speeding ticket while on suspension, the Secretary of State will add 90 days to the original suspension.

Another consequence of a driving-on-suspension or -revocation ticket is the possibility of jail time. The maximum jail time for a first offender is 90 days, and for a second offender it is one year. It is common for judges to hand down jail time on repeat offenders.

A license suspension means that a person cannot drive for a set period of time. After the time period expires, the license is returned automatically upon payment of the reinstatement fee.

When a license is revoked, it is not returned until approved by the Secretary of State. A revocation is the most extreme licensing sanction available to a judge or the Secretary of State. □

The annual Paper sale will be held on Saturday, December 7, from 7 a.m. until 3 p.m. People who can help to sell papers for this worthwhile cause should meet at Fire Station #4 on December 7.

If you have any questions, or wish to make a donation, please call Officer John Smagner at 942-6864. □

Happy Birthday—I would like to send special birthday wishes to those of my neighbors at the Tower who were born in the month of December: Fannie Archer, Floyd Crandall, Imogene Davis, Leona Dudley, Julia Horton, Nellie Kornelson, Roy Livingston, Betty Mack, Lucretia Maze, and Lois Wilke.

Welcome—On behalf of all Romulus Tower residents, I would like to welcome our newest neighbors, Lois Wilke and Madeline Yeary. We hope that they will enjoy living in our little community.

In Appreciation—Tower seniors will be sending "homemade gifts from the heart" to the Romulus police and fire departments on Wednesday, December 18, to say "thank you" to that fine group of men and women who are always there for us, but are often taken for granted. We do appreciate them!

WW Gets to the Heart of the Matter with Cholesterol Facts

You recently had a cholesterol screening that showed your blood cholesterol was elevated, and your doctor has advised you to modify your diet. So, you begin to choose products with labels which clearly state "cholesterol free" or "no cholesterol," believing that you are making wise food choices which will have a positive effect on your health. Perhaps you need to read further.

According to Dr. Marilyn Schorin, Manager, Nutrition Services, Weight Watchers International, "It is not enough to simply know the level of cholesterol in your blood. It is essential to understand how diet affects your blood cholesterol levels, and then learn to read product labels correctly in order to make food choices that will benefit your health.

"Scientific studies have found that too much fat in the diet is responsible for raising blood cholesterol levels even more than the cholesterol in foods," Schorin says. "This is a very important distinction. It is not enough for consumers to merely recognize the word 'cholesterol' — it's essential to understand the different types of fat and where they are found."

Saturated fat is found primarily in animal foods like butter, cheese, whole milk, ice cream, and cream, and is concentrated in the fat that surrounds many cuts of meat and poultry as well as the whole marbling found in most meats. These foods contribute the greatest amount of saturated fat in the American diet. Other common sources of saturated fat in our diets are cookies, cakes, crackers, and some snack foods when they are made with vegetable fats like coconut oil, cocoa butter (in chocolate), palm oil, and palm kernel oil; and fats that are solid at room temperature, including shortening, lard, and stick margarine.

There are two other types of fats to know about — and both have been shown to reduce blood cholesterol levels when substituted for saturated fat in the diet. Polyunsaturated fat is found in plant and vegetable oils, including corn, soybean, safflower, sunflower, and sesame oils. Fish such as herring, salmon, mackerel, and sardines are rich in omega-3 fatty acids — another polyunsaturated fat.

Monounsaturated fats can also be helpful in lowering blood cholesterol levels. Monounsaturated fat is found in olive oil, peanut oil, and canola oil.

Dietary cholesterol is not really a fat, but is a waxy substance that is only found in animal foods such as organ meats, cheese, egg yolks, butter, and other dairy products. There is never cholesterol in any foods that come from plants, like peanut butter, vegetable oils, etc. — yet, some manufacturers of these products are making "cholesterol free" claims on their packages.

While a low-cholesterol diet is healthy, Americans can make even greater positive changes in their blood cholesterol levels by decreasing their total fat intake. Government health agencies recommend that no more than 30% of the calories that you eat each day should be from fat, with no more than a third of those from saturated fat.

An easy way to know the limit for fat in your diet is to divide your average daily calorie intake by 30. This gives the number, in grams, of fat that you can consume each day and still stay within the limit of no more than 30% of calories from fat. For example, if your calorie intake averages 1,500 calories daily, 1,500 divided by 30 equals 50 grams of fat. And, since no more than 10% of total calories should be from saturated fat, approximately 16 grams of these 50 grams should be from saturated fat. Remember, these levels are maximums; you can eat less fat daily, but should avoid going over these figures.

Note that the emphasis is on the total amount of fat eaten in one day. That's because the recommendation refers to the percentage of total daily calories from fat, not to the percentage of calories from fat in any one meal, snack, or food. Therefore, during a day, it is possible to consume certain foods that are higher in fat and balance these with lower-fat foods to stay within the recommended daily guidelines.

"Once you know these fat facts, you can be an educated consumer," Schorin believes. "Don't stop at the front of labels, especially when a product label claims 'no cholesterol.' Turn the package over to the nutrition panel and learn exactly how much fat the product contains, and calculate how it will fit into your daily fat intake."

Schorin makes these recommendations for a heart-healthy diet:

- Choose lean meats; eat poultry without skin; select low-fat or nondairy products.
- Eat fish more often and serve legumes (peas and beans) occasionally.
- Use less fat when you cook: trim visible fats off meats; broil and roast instead of frying. Stay away from fatty sauces.
- Check product labels: choose lower-fat versions of high-fat foods like ice cream, salad dressings, mayonnaise.
- Cook stews and soups ahead of time; refrigerate and allow fat to rise to the top. Skim the fat off and discard. □

"Chap Chat" (Chaplain's Chattings)

Homemade Sunshine

By Felix A. Lorenz Jr., chaplain, Wayne County Sheriff Department

A Chinese proverb says, "One must not open his shop until he has smiled."

Smiles can bring out the sunshine on the cloudiest days. And you can't damage a smile by cracking it!

I'm told that it takes 13 muscles to smile, 64 to frown. Why overwork?

"Life taught me her lesson;

I hold it as truth

That a smile in the heart is the secret of youth."

The sun is about the most powerful thing there is, and it only shines!

*"When you're feeling so blue that no sunshine breaks thru,
And you haven't a ghost
of a smile;*

*Just hunt up a few who are bluer than you
And try cheering them up for a while."*

Mark Twain said, "Wrinkles should merely indicate where smiles have been."

Think it over. . . . □
